IN MEMORIAM

In sad but loving remembrance of my dear father, Aurelious A. baldwin, who died April 12th, 1947, 4 years ago today.

I saw you slowly leaving me,
Helpless I stood by,
And drained the cup of bitter grief
The hour I saw you die.

Some may think I have forgotten you,
And my wounded heart is healed;
But they do not know the sorrow
That is within my heart concealed.

In my heart your memory lingers,
Sweet and tender, fond and true;
I'll think of you forever, dear Real,
And love you 'till I die
—Daughter.

IN MEMORIAM:

In memory of our dear wife and mother, Mrs. A. B. Ferguson, who passed away three years ago, April 7, 1948.

April brings us sad memories that We can never forget,
Because our hearts still ache with sadness.
Only God knows how much we miss you, mother dear;
Some may think we are not lonely When they see us smile,
But little do they know the heartache.
We know you are happy there,
We can only see your smiling face in our dreams.
If only we could awake and see it, How happy it would be.
But we can still feel your guiding hand,
And it helps us over rough places, to that bright celestial land.
—Sadly missed by

Monroe Doctrine Wasn't English Idea

The Monroe Doctrine was not dictated by the British foreign office, but was a diplomatic triumph accomplished independently by the United States.

In fact, Great Britain strongly opposed the principles of the Monroe Doctrine, although Britain wanted other European nations kept out of Latin America.

The Monroe Doctrine was "big talk" for a nation that wasn't even 50 years old and still bothered by many serious internal problems. But President Monroe picked an opportune moment to establish the policy. The principles of the Monroe Doctrine had long been under consideration. The idea of proclaiming the Western Hemisphere to be a unit divorced from the politics of Europe had occupied the minds of American statesmen from the moment of the republic's formation.

The opportunity to adopt such a doctrine came in the 1820's. Canning, the British Foreign Secretary, asked for Anglo-American cooperation. Such cooperation, according to the shrewd Britisher, would protect the United States from Russia, France, and Spain who already held territory in the Western hemisphere.

In return, Canning wanted American help to destroy the alliance of Prussia, Austria, France, and Russia. The suggestion for cooperation aroused great debate in Washington. Should Canning's proposal be adopted or should the United States continue its aloofness from European entanglements?

Fighting in Korea Means Fewer Pictures

U. S. warships pound the Korean coast, and their gun mounts and turrets clang with the roll of empty shell cases. Ashore powder-blackened brass litters the bitter trail of ground fighting. It all means fewer pictures in American newspapers during the months ahead.

Zinc, jack-of-all-work in the metal-maker's furnace, has gone to war.

Once this lustrous, blue-white metal was considered akin to the philosopher's stone by ancient alchemists, because it would turn copper into "gold." For many defense needs today, zinc is gold itself. Its myriad uses, from brass cartridge cases to galvanized garbage cans, have again put it high on the nation's list of critical materials.

Newspaper cuts are nicked with acid on plates of rolled zinc. As 1951 began, the National Production Authority ordered all newspapers to cut their use of zinc by 20 per cent —in effect, to pass up printing one photograph in every five. At big city news desk and crossroads weekly, the notice is up: "Less art!"

An enemy of rust, zinc has an amazing chemical ability to sacrifice itself for other metals. Steel and iron are major benefactors. Given a treatment of molten zinc, they acquire a gleaming overcoat that will long withstand the insidious ravages of atmospheric moisture or the ocean's wave. Steel does not corrode as long as any zinc remains.

Ancient Transportation

After the Romans built such roads as the Appian Way, travel by wheel increased, and two carriage types were devised—the reda and carruca. Rome also adopted the four-wheeled Grecian farm wagon, to haul supplies and, in a decorated form, for state occasions and pageants. The sweep of the barbarian across Europe suspended the development of carriages. During medieval times they were used exclusively by women — a hardy lot, indeed, considering the lack of springs on such crude conveyances. The opposite sex chose an easy way out by deeming it unmanly to ride in them. Covered carriages, suspended on straps, appeared at the beginning of the 15th century, an innovation which induced kings and princes to affect the coach by that century's end. By 1670 carriage bodies were mounted on steel springs, a trick which eventually bounced the wheeled vehicle into numerous new forms, bearing such names as brougham, stanhope, landau, phaeton, curricle, tilbury whiskey, victoria, and others.

Front and Center, Finish Experts!
Manufacturing for the armed services — whether it's bombs or tarpaulins, tanks or communications equipment — demands specialized knowledge in the finishing of every vital component. In the case of bombs, for instance, the inside must be protected with acid-proof finishes to prevent spontaneous combustion between high explosives and uncoated metal. Outside, the bomb must be protected against every conceivable kind of weather conditions. Experts in industrial finishing know the latest government specifications and the proper finishes to do the job.

The Comforts of Home
The trend toward more modern, colorful and comfortable offices continues with the erection of each new office building. An investment broker's office here in the nation's capital has chartreuse-painted walls, colorful draperies and furniture, air-conditioning and a translux screen with latest sales and quotations flashing across an enlarged tape.

We Are His People'

Lesson for April 15, 1951

OPEN A Christian today in churnish repeats the ancient ion: "We are His people," if he ves what he is saying he is asing himself with Abraham, and Jacob.

God of the is not a st first cause" principle' of sort. First, last always He is God of the Covver and again He is t the "God of Isaac Jacob."

e stories of these men are not campfire tales of legendary tators. They are the story of men were related to God ir covenant; they were e people" in a special way New Testament we find the ce yet stirring declaration God was "not ashamed to be God."

Living God

e FULL meaning of what the ible has to tell us about God be discovered best by coming an understanding of what covenant idea means. What is set by the Covenant God, one makes covenants with men? First of all, it means that God living. He is not a mere server of events with which has nothing to do. If we old put it into modern Amerin language, God does not sit the bleachers; He plays the me. He does not, as it were, the newspapers to see how e war against evil goes on; is on the field directing e battles.

d is not something to be talked a problem, an X; He is not ution of men's minds, God is me for an idea. He is more than any one who thinks about Him. He is more real than any who doubted Him.

Persons Make Covenants

e GREAT difference between ese and people is that people have wills of their own. And person. You will not find e Bible any statement directly g that God is personal, or a person, for God is personal. God and man is mentioned the idea of personality is

No one who ever knew God ould think of calling Him "it" es with capital letters. If we y "it" about God it is not beuse we think He is masculine: ld be quite as true to call m Mother-God as Father-God.

Dr. Reynolds, Presbyterian ssionary to Korea, has pointed all the best qualities we asso- with motherhood are in the e attributed to God. So if we God "He" what we are emsis is that He is personal. He has intelligence and will of own. no vague It or That or the Covenant God is one takes the initiative. The Bible of a God who does not wait a snow clad peak of eternity till mankind somehow breaks a up the vast ranges to His lofty ne. It tells of a God who walks the valley of the shadows, seekthem. All religions have gods; e of them very "high and lifted but only the Bible reveals the God, whose mercy does not e to be bought or coaxed, but a who approaches man in mercy. God who is all-giving Love.

Makes His Own Terms

THE same time, God remains God. He is not on a level man. He takes the initiative. e all who will be His friends. But with those who turn their backs, who go their own ways, who care little or nothing for His great purposes, He do not seek His will, God makes no covenants.

God's will is the welfare of mankind. God will is the destruction evil, the creation and triumph good. God is light and in Him is darkness at all. If we love darkness rather than light, we have no right to be called His people. We cannot call ourselves His people because we are Americans, or because we belong to some church; we can call ourselves His people only if our hearts are in tune with

Natural Bridge Attracts Many Tourists

Natural Bridge, April 11.- Perhaps the most famous patch of sky in the world exists over Rockbridge County, Virginia, along U. S. Highway 11, says the Virginia Travel Council. Though seen by hundreds of thousands annually, this sky view is rarely observed for itself, however, for it is framed by one of the seven natural wonders of the world, famed Natural Bridge. From the moment the visitor stops at the Natural Bridge Hotel, the newly completed motor lodge, or at the Gate House, there is a tingle of anticipation. And that feeling increases after passing through the Gate House and walking down the dogwood lined path beside a chuckling stream and past gnarled, twisted arbor vitae trees estimated to have been growing a thousand years before the discovery of America. But no matter how great the anticipation, it is exceeded by the sweeping emotion that accompanies the first glimpse of the towering bridge. Though painted, photographed and written about many times, Natural Bridge can be done justice by actually seeing it. Except for the ceaseless chatter of Cedar Creek which flows under the massive stone arch, a hush of incredibility falls on the groups of visitors when first viewing this handiwork of God and nature.

Once owned by Thomas Jefferson, who paid 20 shillings, or less than five dollars, for a 157 acre plot which surrounds this wonder, Natural Bridge is a true American Landmark. George Washington surveyed it, leaving his still legible initials on the limestone sides of the arch as well as on a recently unearthed stone which also bears his benchmark. Many other famous Americans have visited Natural Bridge from time to time, camie away with words of highest praise.

Legend says Natural Bridge was discovered by Indians, who found in it answer to their prayers for an escape route over the sheer walls of the canyon which it spans. Indian women and children were supposed to have tested the strength of the bridge first by pressing before the non-expendable Indian braves would try, which is in humorous contrast to the present day stream of enormous trucks as well as passenger cars which travel estimated to weigh over 36 000 tons, is over forty feet thick 215 feet high, some 55 feet higher than Niagara Falls, and averages over 80 feet wide.

Natural Bridge is open the year around and may be seen at night as well as by day. At night it is spectacularly lighted by concealed beacons while a recorded voice intones the seven days of the creation from the Bible, accompanied by choral and organ music of some of the world's finest compositions.

Here also is found one of the shortest, yet one of the most welcome bus lines in America. Shuttling to and from from the Gate House to the Bridge, stubby, little busses transport the old, invalids, and the weary along a short, winding road, paralleling the beautiful walkway along a cascading mountain stream.

Through the giant stone arch and back along a path that parallels Cedar Creek, the visitor will see Salt Peter Cave, the mysterious Lost River whose source and destination has never been found, and finally beautiful Lace Falls formed where the creek flows into the gorge.

Enforcement of Trout Laws

With the opening of the trout season on April 20, Virginia's famous fishing waters will receive an extra measure of protection and law enforcement this year, according to M. Wheeler Kesterson, Chief of the law enforcement division of the Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries.

Mr. Kesterson stated that mountain counties containing trout water would receive reinforcements to the warden force during the coming season, since the job of patrolling and checking the large numbers of fishermen who flock to the streams would be an almost impossible task for the county wardens alone.

Opening the season at 12:00 o'clock noon this year will be an immeasurable help to the warden force in the performance of their duties, according to the warden chief, since it will eliminate much of the former pre-dawn illegal fishing that has plagues the law men in the past.

In addition to the extra wardens, conservation officers of the Commission's "flying squadron" will be sent into the trout fishing areas to aid in law enforcement work.

Garden Week In Virginia

Activity swings into high gear around two hundred Virginia homes and gardens this month as the opening of Historic Garden Week draws nearer every day.

At Chelsea on the Mattaponi River the effects of winter have all but been cleared away. In the two formal gardens pansies and hyacinths are already in heavy bloom among the maze of English box. Borders and paths are being painstakingly manicured by the elderly Negro gardener. To this comment that he seemed to be digging up flowers instead of weeds, he replied that flowers were as much nuisance as weeds when they get away from you.

Although the hyacinths will be passed bloom by the last week in April, fat buds on the tulips and dogwood give promise of maximum color barring last minute extreme weather, according to the Virginia Travel Council.

Built for Augustine Moore, direct descendent of Sir Thomas Moore of Chelsea, England who was Chancellor in the reign of Henry VIII, Chelsea mansion has undergone little change since it was built in 1709. The woodwork is the original, including the flooring and the naturally finished pine paneling in the parlors, which flank the entrance hall paneled in walnut. It was at Chelsea that the Knights of the Golden Horseshoe were organized by Governor Spotswood and John Fontaine in 1716, and from here they started their memorable trip to the Blue Ridge Mountain section.

In the Revolutionary War, Alexander Moore served as Aide-de-Camp to General LaFayette, who used the house as his headquarters in 1781 just before the battle of Yorktown when his army was camped on the plantation.

Both grounds and house will be open to visitors for three days, April 24 through 27. The estate is located on Route 30, 28 miles from Williamsburg and 45 miles from Richmond.

Ladino Acreage Set for Increase

Acreage of ladino clover and orchard grass in Virginia this year is expected to jump to about 350,000 acres—an increase of 70,000 acres over last year, says P. H. DeHart, Extension agronomist at V. P. I.

The value of the increased acreage, he says, is seen in the answer to this question—"what will a ladino clover and orchard grass pasture do for you?"

In swine production, good pasture will reduce the grain requirements by 10 per cent, and the protein supplements by 50 per cent.

In raising pullets, the feed cost can be reduced by 10 per cent.

One hundred pounds of digestible nutrients from good permanent pasture will cost about 50 to 60 cents; from a mixed dairy ration, 100 pounds of digestible nutrients will cost about $5.00.

A good system of pastures that will provide at least 240 days of continuous grazing will reduce the feed cost of producing milk by 20 to 25 per cent.

As for beef cattle—you'll be in trouble if you even try to produce them without good pasture.
